

Newport that night. I said I didn't know and he started to smile.

Cross-examination by Mr. Fitzgerald for Mrs. Mohr.

Q. Did you not write Mrs. Mohr to come to the doctor's office? A. I never did.

Q. Didn't you have a plan with the doctor to get her into his office and then have a policeman come in and catch her at his desk and arrest her? A. I never heard of any such thing.

SPOKE OF HIRING THUGS TO KILL DOCTOR.

Previous to the calling of Miss Ormby's testimony was given by George C. Rooks, brother-in-law of Miss Burger, that Mrs. Mohr once declared to him she could have thugs hired to murder her husband.

In the course of Rooks's testimony a letter written to him by Mrs. Mohr in December, 1912, was produced. In this letter Mrs. Mohr made another threat to kill Miss Burger.

When Mrs. Mohr's attorneys got hold of Rooks in cross-examination they sought to bring out not only the friendly relations which existed between Rooks and Miss Burger, and his jealousy of Dr. Mohr, but also his efforts to ingratiate himself with Mrs. Mohr when she went to him for assistance in her marital troubles.

Rooks had already given the police a card admittedly written by Mrs. Mohr to him a year before the murder of Dr. Mohr threatening violence to Miss Burger if she did not end her relations with Dr. Mohr and specifically stating that if Miss Burger went again to the Mohr Newport home she should not come out alive.

The first questioning of Rooks by Deputy Attorney General Phillips concerned this card, which Rooks identified. Also he identified a letter which, he said, was in Mrs. Mohr's handwriting.

Mr. Phillips explained to the Court that the letter was put in as evidence that threats had been made by Mrs. Mohr many years before the murder. Mr. Lewis, of counsel to Victor Brown, one of the negroes jointly accused with Mrs. Mohr of killing the physician, protested against the introduction of the writings, saying they were only applicable to the indictment charging the assault upon Miss Burger, which was not then on trial.

OLD THREAT TO KILL EMILY BURGER.

The Judge Stannard ruled against him and Mr. Phillips read the letter. It was dated December, 1912, and read:

"Dear Mr. Rooks: My son Charles has told me that his father has taken him three times to call upon your sister-in-law. Each time she came right out and talked with him. Charles also said he had also seen the same early in his office, when she opened the door for him. I believe my little son knows where she lives. I showed him the house myself. His father had him there quite a few times in the pony cart. I am not going to put up with this. I will get right after her. A week ago last Thursday he carried Charles as far as Bristol. Charles says he called up at a public telephone station. Please look into this and don't let her jolly you about not seeing Dr. Mohr.

"I am going to get after her as soon as I hear from you. She is not going to get the best of me. I will kill her before I am through with the whole thing. This shows what a low person she is after a good woman like me had talked to her. I have given her fair warning. She will be sorry before I am through with her."

Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Editorial Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished in From One to Five Days at Home.

The Editors Sanitarium, located at 697 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a free book showing the deadly effect of this tobacco habit and how it can be banished in from one to five days at home.

Miss who has used tobacco for more than fifty years has tried this method and says it is entirely successful, and in addition to banishing the desire for tobacco has improved their health wonderfully. This method includes the desire for tobacco, to matter whether it is smoking, chewing, cigarettes or snuff dipping.

As this book is being distributed free, send a card to the Editor, and your name and address at once.—Adv.

Business Bargains!

If you are looking to invest some money in a business enterprise that will yield returns make the right start by reading the

"Business Opportunity"

Advertisements Printed in The Daily and Sunday World

No other newspaper offers you so many advantages to make a successful investment. The World prints more "Business Opportunities" than all the other morning newspapers added together.

fore she is through. I would like to hear from you before Saturday.

"Sincerely yours,
"ELIZABETH F. MOHR."

Rooks testified that Mrs. Mohr had had repeated talks with him in his office in South Station, Boston.

"COULD HIRE THUGS TO HAVE HIM MURDERED."

Q. What was her attitude toward her husband? A. It was very bitter.

Q. Did she ever speak of violence toward him? A. Yes. She said to me once in my office that she could hire a couple of thugs and have him murdered.

Q. Did she ever say that Miss Burger would never live to marry her husband? A. Yes, she said that to me in my office.

In his cross-examination of Rooks, Mr. Fitzgerald, of counsel to Mrs. Mohr, sought to show animus he claimed Rooks felt in the case.

Q. You preferred to be a friend to this little woman (pointing to Mrs. Mohr), didn't you? A. Yes, I wanted to help her.

Q. You didn't keep those letters to help her, did you? A. I didn't know I had them.

Q. Do you remember how it was you first met Mrs. Mohr? A. It was in 1912 that I went to Mrs. Mohr's house at the request of Miss Burger, who said she heard that Mrs. Mohr had threatened to "lay her cold."

Q. Did you ever say to Mrs. Mohr, "You're too nice a little girl to waste yourself on a fellow like Dr. Mohr?" A. I don't remember saying anything like that.

Q. Didn't Mrs. Mohr tell you her husband had beaten her, didn't she show you the bruised spot, where he had struck her because he found out she had telephoned to Miss Burger about going with her husband?

A. She showed me the "spot."

Q. Did you ever say that you had a photograph of Mr. Mohr? A. We had several photographs in our office, all covered up.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Cushing, Mrs. Mohr's attorney, about it? He came to see me and in the course of his visit asked me what the mechanism was.

Q. Did you ever say to Mr. Cushing that you considered Dr. Mohr such a mean scoundrel you'd like to see him put out of the face of the earth? A. No.

Q. When you met Mrs. Mohr in South Station didn't you tell her you'd like to put a couple of bullets in him? A. No.

Q. Didn't you say you'd get him if he didn't keep away from Emily Burger? A. I never said that about any one.

Q. Were you not jealous of Miss Emily Burger? A. No.

Q. Didn't Mrs. Mohr say that she had gone to Miss Burger's father and asked him to intervene between Dr. Mohr and his daughter? And didn't you say to Mrs. Mohr, "Let me attend to that. I control Miss Burger, and want to help you all I can?"

A. I told Mrs. Mohr I wanted to be her friend and help her.

Q. Were you at home the night this shooting of Dr. Mohr occurred? A. Yes.

Q. Did you answer the telephone that night? A. No, my mother did. I was almost in bed.

Q. Did you make the charge against Heals that night at the hospital for several persons that it had all been framed up by him and Mrs. Mohr to get the doctor? A. I don't remember making any such statement as to Heals himself. No one else was present.

"Didn't Heals say you're only jumping on me because I'm a nigger?"

"No, he didn't."

"Were you in Dr. Mohr's office the morning he died?"

"Yes."

"What were you looking for—a will?"

"I went to the house at the request of Mr. George Hurley."

Q. Did you ever say to Mrs. Mohr, "You're very foolish, a nice little woman like you, to stick to a man like the doctor, who is going out all the time having a good time?"

"Did you ever say to her, 'You ought to go out and enjoy yourself too?'"

"No, never. I told her she ought to go out to show and the opera."

"Didn't Mrs. Mohr say to you in reply, 'I don't want any other man. I love my husband?'"

"No, she didn't."

"Although you heard Mrs. Mohr say all the things she intended to do to Miss Burger, you never thought to say to Mrs. Burger, 'Look out for her, did you?'"

"No, I thought it was just all talk of Mrs. Mohr."

KEPT EMILY BURGER FROM DOCTOR'S MONEY.

On cross-examination all that Mr. Lewis wished to strengthen was Rooks's statement that the night of the shooting he had made certain accusations against Heals.

When examined directly by Mr. Phillips, Rooks firmly denied that Mrs. Mohr had ever said she loved her husband.

Q. Did she ever say she wanted you to help her? A. Because she was afraid Miss Burger was getting the doctor's money or property.

Q. Did she ever ask you to find out whether this was true, A. No. She never did.

Q. You talked with Heals after you had seen your sister-in-law at the hospital? A. Yes, I talked Heals after the shooting.

Q. By Mr. Fitzgerald—You were asked by Mrs. Mohr to help her. But you wouldn't do anything to prevent Miss Burger from getting Dr. Mohr's money, would you? A. I did prevent it. I did keep Miss Burger from getting it.

Q. What have you against Miss Burger? A. Nothing at all.

Q. Didn't you tell Mrs. Mohr in South Station that you were going to hang two red lights on Dr. Mohr's door? And didn't she say you ought not to do anything like that because she'd been a good friend of yours? A. No, nothing like that was ever said by me to Mrs. Mohr.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

Minutely searching inquiry was made by both sides at the opening of the trial to-day to determine whether the things taken from Dr. Mohr's pockets at the Rhode Island State Hospital were blood-stained before they were taken out or got the stains from the hands of the hospital orderlies who searched and undressed him.

The contention of the defense was that the stains were put on by the orderlies. Three orderlies were called, James A. Logan, Robert Loring and George Downing, and all testified that the stains were blood-stained when he took a number of papers from Dr. Mohr's pockets.

AUTHOR ENDS HER LIFE TO ESCAPE YEARS OF MISERY

Mrs. Dora Knowlton Ranous Found in Furnished Room Filled With Gas.

HAD PARALYTIC STROKE.

Left Pathetic Note Declaring She Knew Blindness Would Add to Suffering.

Mrs. Dora Knowlton Ranous, long noted as an author and crowned by the French Academy for translations of Flaubert, de Maupassant and others, committed suicide last night at No. 246 West One Hundred and Third Street.

Mrs. Ranous suffered a paralytic stroke a few weeks ago. She left St. Luke's Hospital on Monday and took a furnished room. No one saw her come in last evening, and this morning the landlady smelled gas and sent for help. Policeman Cress opened the door, which had been packed about with cotton, and found Mrs. Ranous dead in bed with a tube from a gas jet to her mouth.

On a table was a letter to Dr. Rosamond Johnson of No. 2 West Ninety-fifth Street, marked "Private and confidential," an envelope containing $50 and a book on the Union Savings Bank showing a balance of $270.

Dr. Johnson was notified by the police. He had been associated with Mrs. Ranous for years in editorial work and was surprised at the news of her death. He recalled that her mother and her grandmother had died of paralysis and thought that fear of lingering illness after the paralytic shock she had lately suffered had unsettled her reason.

"I am so weary of my broken life, with prospects of worse to come," she wrote to Dr. Johnson. "I cannot bear it any longer. I long for peace and rest. I will try to find it with my own dear Alice. Her photograph is in my suit case. Put it on my breast when I am laid away. Mr. Chubb, No. 236 West Thirty-seventh Street, and No. 2364 Eighty-third Street, Bensonhurst, will help pay the expenses."

Mr. Chubb was the husband of Mrs. Ranous's daughter Alice, who died seven years ago.

"God will not be angry with me," the letter went on, "as I have confessed all to him. He knows how much I can bear, and that I can bear no more. My eyes are failing me. The blackest misery is ahead of me. There is no one to take care of my eyes and my health."

"Please do not reproach me, but have a kind word for my friend."

"DORA."

Mrs. Ranous was born at Ashfield, Mass., more than fifty years ago, the daughter of Alexander Hamilton and Augusta Knowlton Thompson. She received her education at private schools and at Packard Institute. Since girlhood she had shown marked literary ability. She translated plays for Augustin Daly. Her best known books were "Literature of Italy," "Great Events of History," "The Authors' Digest" and "The Diary of a Debutante."

On a table in her room were galley proofs of an article entitled "Good English and Good Form."

Samuel D. Chubb, whose wife was Mrs. Ranous's daughter, is manager for the McCall Company, publishers, at No. 236 West Thirty-seventh Street. He was shocked to hear of Mrs. Ranous's death.

"She was such a fine woman," he said, "with a splendid mind and a noble character. The thought of my daughter's paralysis preyed on her mind for years. I shall see that her wishes are carried out."

KAISER IN SERBIA, SEES BULGAR KING

Monarchs Review a Procession of Bulgarian, Macedonian and German Troops.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A despatch received by Reuter's Telegram Company says that Emperor William was in Nish, Serbia, yesterday. The German Emperor met King Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

"The monarchs greeted each other cordially," the despatch says, "and then reviewed from the dais a procession of Bulgarian, Macedonian and German troops."

The Emperor presented King Ferdinand with a Field Marshal's baton and the King appointed the Emperor as Honorary Commander of a Bulgarian infantry regiment.

Among the Emperor's retinue were Gen. von Falkenhayn, Chief of the General Staff; Field Marshal von Mackensen, Adj. Gen. von Plehens, von Chelius and von Lyncker and Admiral von Mueller. King Ferdinand was accompanied by Princess Boris and Cyril, Premier Radoslawoff and others.

To Verify the Russian Against Grip. When Grip is present, LAXATIVE BREAD is used as a test. As this combination of Grip and LAXATIVE BREAD is used as a test, it is found that the Russian is not a Grip.

Testimonial for Corner Hotel. Representatives of 250,000 Union men will hold a conference at No. 211 East Forty-fifth Street to-night (8 o'clock) for a testimonial to Corner Hotel.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day will be held on Monday, March 13, at 11 o'clock, from 115 to 117 West 115th Street.

Parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day. A parade of the coming St. Patrick's Day